

PHOTOGRAPHY/ GARRY BRYANT

It's yesterday once more in Cache

Reece Summers, a Utah State University graduate student, operates an old Russell steam engine used to thresh grain at the Ronald V. Jensen Living Historical Farm in Cache Valley. The threshing demonstration is part of the Festival of the American West, which opened this weekend at USU and will continue through Saturday. The farm generally is open to the public Tuesday through Saturday, but because of the festival will open Monday this week.

Burden, 39, and Karen Main, 45, endure a Alaska. Main, from Gillette, Wyo., was one of Burden's boss, and she's the first to marry.

July 27th . . .

. . . the 208th day of 1986. There are 157 days left in the year.

On July 27, 1953, local time, the Korean War armistice was signed at Panmunjom, ending three years of fighting. It had taken 255 meetings over two years and 17 days to reach the agreement.

On this date:

■ In 1954, Britain and Egypt agreed on terms ending British control of the Suez Canal.

■ In 1960, Vice President Richard M. Nixon was nominated for president at the Republican Convention in Chicago.

■ In 1974, the House Judiciary Committee voted 27-11 to recommend President Richard M. Nixon's impeachment on a charge that he had personally engaged in a course of conduct designed to obstruct justice in the Watergate case.

■ In 1980, on day 267 of the Iranian hostage crisis, the deposed Shah of Iran died at a military hospital outside Cairo, Egypt, at age 60.

Birthdays:

Former baseball manager Leo Durocher is 80. Actor Keenan Wynn is 70. TV producer Norman Lear is 64. Skater Peggy Fleming is 38.

g post by John Acosta, a reporter, tried the cardio-pulmonary resuscitation movements she saw Hemsley perform on TV a few nights earlier.

"Without that show, she wouldn't be here," Acosta said Friday.

In that program, Hemsley, a black, performs CPR on a Ku Klux Klan member against his wishes. Hemsley learned of the rescue when a reporter for the San Antonio Light contacted the actor's publicist.

No starving-artist days — just karate kick to stardom

Ralph Macchio has never been a starving artist. "I didn't pay my dues. Everything happened so fast for me," says the star of the "Karate Kid" movies. "I'm trying to ward off all the crazy Hollywood stuff. The family is still important to me. That's why I live at home — it's like sanity." Macchio didn't have to audition for any of his movie roles, but he did to get his current job — starring with Robert De Niro and Burt Young off-Broadway in "Cuba and His Teddy Bear." "I wanted to prove myself," says Macchio, 24. "I was extremely nervous because I wanted the role so bad. I didn't think I'd get it because how does a middle-class Long Island tight-knit family person pull off playing a streetwise Cuban heroin user?" Macchio has greatly enjoyed the stage experience. "After 'Karate Kid II' and all that mumbo jumbo stuff, it's great to get back to acting," he says. "If I could make a living from the theater I'd do it."

Goldwater leaves hospital

Sen. Barry Goldwater went home Saturday from Walter Reed Army Medical Center where he was treated for abdominal pain this week, a hospital spokesman said.

The 77-year-old Republican from Arizona, who will retire from the Senate this year, entered the hospital Wednesday for pains of indigestion. His office quoted doctors as saying the discomfort may have resulted from a dinner the previous evening.

Goldwater's press secretary, Jim Ferguson, said Goldwater could have left Friday by decided to stay another night in case further testing was needed.

Sunday spotlight